

services

product sourcing:

tileform tile & stones services and product sourcing operates out of a resourceful architectural design library that is filled with a huge range of surface materials: tile, stone, porcelain pavers, porcelain slabs, glass, lvt, engineered woods; quartz for countertops and other surface materials. Clients use tileform at no-cost services such as product sourcing for the right material for the right project. clients send their product specification sourcing board and tileform sends back options boards for selection.

when designing commercial spaces, tileform understands the critical details involved, such as nominal sizing, technical requirements, and which manufacturers produce different surface materials most efficiently.

services for architects & designers:

choosing the right surface material supplier for your project matters. tileform offers unique design and sourcing services, express delivery samples, custom product development, specification review and consultation, consolidation of surface materials through a single supplier, large volume supply management, quality assurance, and more.

large project material supply management:

tileform's proactively coordinates the production and shipment of material to meet the installation schedule of your project.

on larger projects, materials needed for the project require a special production run to ensure shade and caliber consistency for tile, and dye lot. Success in supplying material, specially produced, requires proactive management in conjunction with the manufacturer, general contractor, and installer to ensure project scheduling is met. tileform is dedicated to any project management professionals that coordinate material supply for large projects. through consistent communication with all parties, our team proactively coordinates the production and shipment of material to meet the installation schedule of your project. through this process, we work to provide a more efficient experience for all project stakeholders.

logistics coordination:

to achieve the most success on a project, it's not just about the right materials being installed, but also supplying the material on-time and with utmost efficiency. tileform will proactively work with you to coordinate and sequence the supply of materials in the most timely and cost-effective manner. whether it's coordinating a door-to-door container delivery or air-freighting a few boxes of material to finish a job, tileform can advise you on the best method to get material when you need it by the best value method possible.